Accredited Theological Studies by eLearning

About King's

Founded in 1990 King's Evangelical Divinity School provides innovative theological studies by open and distance learning. We offer Bachelor of Theology, Master of Arts (Theology) and Graduate Diploma programmes, all accredited in the United Kingdom. King's also offers less demanding courses for those leading busy lives.

The school specialises in online theological studies, with a special emphasis on biblical interpretation and application, as well as offering pathway routes in Jewish-Christian studies within our degrees. About 40% of our students train for future or existing ministry, a fifth go on to study for a higher qualification in Theology, while the remainder seek to utilise their new knowledge and skills to serve their local church.

PrayerNeeds

An important aspect of King's curriculum and ministry is an academic focus upon the Jewish origins of the Christian faith, responding to supersessionism (replacement theology), contributing to Christians' accurate knowledge and understanding of the Middle East region and conflict, exploring the ongoing relationships between the Church, Jewish believers in Jesus (Messianic believers) and the Jewish people, and also supporting Messianic believers and groups. King's Principal Dr Calvin Smith researches, publishes and speaks widely on these issues, both within the academy and across the wider Church.

King'sCentre for Jewish-Christian Studies

Over the next year King's is launching a new Centre for Jewish-Christian Studies (CJCS), an academic study and advocacy centre to further these aims. We seek to equip students and future ministers to engage with these important issues in a knowledgeable, prayerful and compassionate manner, to train and equip those called to Jewish ministry, and encourage prayer for and evangelism to the Jewish and Arab peoples in the region. The work of CJCS will consist of:

- Provision of theological education and training for existing and future leaders, especially those called to Jewish ministry
- Establishment of a scholarship fund to assist those called to such ministry
- To serve the Messianic movement through involvement with and support for ministries among the Jewish people (including Jewish evangelism), and equipping Gentile believers to understand and engage with the theological and practical issues facing today's Messianic movement
- Academic engagement on the issue of the relationship between the Church and Israel through presentations, conferences, symposia and publications

- Engagement with the wider Church on these issues through Bible studies, seminars and workshops, publications, Internet activity and church talks

Work is well-underway at the academic level, with new modules for both our undergraduate and postgraduate degrees coming on stream over the next year. Yet there are other pressing needs for prayer if the Centre is to be fully operational in the next year, including:

- Establishing and securing donations for a scholarship fund for those called to Jewish ministry and study at King's
- The development of a library for Jewish-Christian studies
- Securing financial resources for the day-to-day work of the Centre
